RE: SB 213

Dear Representative Vaupel and Members of the Committee:

I am writing on behalf of the Academy of Integrative Pain Management (formerly the American Academy of Pain Management), and as a resident of Grand Rapids, Michigan, in support of SB 213, an act relating to telehealth that would safely and appropriately expand access to vital health care services to rural Michiganders.

As you know, the population of our state is widely dispersed geographically; however, healthcare providers, particularly specialists and sub-specialists, tend to be concentrated near the larger urban centers of Grand Rapids and Detroit, becoming further dispersed as one moves to the north. With today's technology, we have the capability of providing high quality health care services to even our most remote populations through the use of telehealth. However, under Michigan's current telehealth law, health care providers may not prescribe controlled substances—vital tools used to treat a vast myriad of health conditions—via telehealth. This prohibition, whether made in error or due to a well-intentioned effort to carefully control prescription medications, is simply not in the best interests of the particular needs of Michiganders.

Many people with pain experience significant pain relief and improved functioning as a result of using controlled substances. This includes, but is certainly not limited to, patients with fibromyalgia, complex regional pain syndrome, migraines, neuropathic pain, ehlers-danlos syndrome, traumatic injuries, and so many more. It also includes patients with cancer, who may not only need access to controlled substances to treat their cancer-related pain, but will also need controlled substances to treat a whole host of other cancer-related health issues. Controlled substances are also used for many conditions unrelated to pain, including for the treatment of panic disorders, attention deficit disorder, depression, epilepsy, narcolepsy, hormone deficiencies, and so many more. Given today's technological advantages and Michigan's exceptionally high-quality health care offerings, Michiganders should have access to high quality care for their individual medical conditions, regardless of where in our great state they choose to live. Passage of SB 213 is a vital step in improving the public health of Michiganders, as it will expand access to high quality health care while simultaneously implementing protections that will ensure patients have access to follow-up care.
